SUBJECT: YOUTH ACTIVITIES CENTRE - CARCLEW.

Increased support for young peoples' performing arts facilities in Adelaide were announced today by the Premier (Mr. Dunstan).

Mr. Dunstan was opening a "Fund Raising Carnival" at Carclew designed to assist the activities of the Bunyip Children's Theatre. Mr. Dunstan said that the Bunyip Children's Theatre was the first of several young peoples' performing arts groups to be located at Carclew.

He said that planning was proceeding so that the centre would, in addition to housing theatre for young people, extend to include such activities as modern dance, painting, sculpture and pottery, and music performance.

"I believe that in a short time Carclew will become the focal point in Adelaide for creative activity by young people.

"A city's creative and artistic development must be based on learnt traditions, and one of the ways by which a Government can encourage this is by supporting such a young peoples' performing arts centre as is being formed at Carclew.

"Eventually the centre will be managed by a joint committee representing all the performing and creative arts organisations involved.

"Similar centres have been established overseas, and perhaps the most notable of these is in the Tivoli Gardens in Copenhagen where a world famous contribution by young people is made to the performing arts activity of that city.

Mr. Dunstan said that with the completion of planning for the major performing arts facilities in Elder Park, it was hoped to be able to transfer the Carclew activities to a more permanent and effectively designed site.

He said that in all this it would be essential for public as well as government support, and that no such comprehensive performing arts scheme for young people could survive without a solid base of public support.
